Verified purchasePaul Davies Reviewed in the United Kingdom on 02 April 2014Cop Series set back in the 80s, fantastic music, great story, superb acting, funny, sad and quite brilliant. follow Life on Mars Was always going to be tricky, but Ashes To Ashes did brilliantly live up to its heritage. Enjoy the thrills, the laughter, the '80s music and some superb characters who loved, hated, fought and would die for each other. This is a quirky non-standard Cop Series with sub-plots, twists and turns like a roller-coaster ride of emotions set back in the nostalgic glamorous and seedy 80s. Love the fantastic music, (Roxy Music, Clash, Jam, Duran Duran, OMD and so many others) woven into the storylines, perhaps the greatest tv story ever! Superb acting, all done in a funny, sad and quite brilliant. follow on from Life on Mars. Also highly acclaimed, as better than (If possible) Life on Mars. The series was packed full of comedy. Ray Carling's undercover mission as a predatory gay or Chris Skelton's mascara-laden turn as a New Romantic clubber to woo Shaz? As for their joint attempts to master the art of covert surveillance - sheer class. Enjoy the fancy dress party that saw Gene as Clint Eastwood, Chris as Superman and Ray portraying a tache-ridden James Bond. Along with firing up his red Audi Quattro, Gene came out with plenty of his trademark one-liners. Gene Hunt, is a marvellous tv character given a superb performance by Philip Glenister. Your eyes will be, inevitably, on the gargeous Alex Drake dressed in the glamourous 80s styles and with a very strong character played brilliantly, effectively replacing Sam Tyler as the cop from the present trapped in the past, trying to get back to her daughter after she was shot and in a coma. Keeley Hawes's performance is superb. Her haunting childhood memories evoked a myriad of reactions and emotions on her face, while her encounters with her mother Caroline - particularly their final farewell - were often moving. This series will leave you laughing, crying and wanting to race on to the next episode, as I did, sometimes watching 3 episodes on the trot until bedtime beckoned! It is that good. Life will never be the same on my TV again. Buy both series of Life On Mars and all 3 of Ashes to Ashes, which are cheaper now than when first released. You will not regret it. Quite simply the most quirky, fast paced, brilliantly written story, superbly acted and what the TV was invented for!Paul Davies FRTCA11 people found this helpfulW. A. D.Reviewed in the United Kingdom on 19 October 2020It gets better thankfully after the first two awful episodes. Verified purchase Steve Reviewed in the United Kingdom on 25 May 2010Now we've seen the end.... Verified purchaseReviewer Russell Clarke's excellent review (above), written in May 2008, asks intriguingly what the chances are of Gene Hunt, Chris Skelton and Ray Carling all being transferred at the same time to the same place, and ponders how the writers will get Alex Drake back to 2008 from the 1980's. Well, having seen the very final, superb, episode of Ashes to Ashes (Series 3), I think we all know now. What we can only now appreciate is the extraordinary vision of the writers of the whole 'Life on Mars/Ashes to Ashes' production, and how cleverly the five series (in all) have been planned. Sure, there is the odd plot hole, but we can now see that it's not just Philip Glenister, John Simm and the rest of the fine acting team who carried us along, but the behind the scenes writing team firing up their very own Quattro in words and actions. We now have the opportunity to purchase the A2A first two series at an incredible price (I assume you've already got Life on Mars), leaving hopefully enough dosh for the grand final series that is the piece of the jigsaw that makes the whole thing make sense. Oh God, I'm getting pretentious now. But for all those of us who've been with this from the beginning, it's great to be able to follow the journey once more.
